83 Cente More Tax on Every $100 Than in 1895, Strong's Piret Tear, and $4 Cents More Than in 1896, Gürey's Last Year—Some of the Assessed Valuations, Fifty-six bulky volumes, containing the tax ells of New York city, were put into the hands of the Board of Aldermen yesterday by President Barker of the Tax Commission as the resuit of nine months' ardnous labor. Such a task as the one just finished has never confronted a New York Tax Commission. An abnormally large budget, which the lavish "economy" of the reform administration had brought forth. made it imperative ithat President Barker and his associates, Commissioners Wells and Sutro, should scrape up enough of an increase of the total assessment to keep the tax rate down as far as possible. They succeeded nobly in bringing up the total assessment, for the rolls show a net increase of $89,537,243. Last year the increase was $13,615,625.

There are two things chiefly that made this great increase possible. The annexation of the Westchester towns accounts for much of it; improvements of city real estate account for a

The total real-estate valuation for 1896 is $1,731,509,143, an increase of $85,480,488 over 1895. As the normal increase in the yearly total valuations has been from swenty to thirty millions, the increase of nearty ninety millions will be most welcome to Mayor Strong. As it is, the tax rate will take a most alarming jump On a total valuation last year of $2,018,047,682. it required a tax rate of 1.91 to rates $37,476,-960.64, the '95 budget. This year the budget as it stands calls for $43,996,571.31. To this will be added by the Board of Alderman about 8800,000 for deficiencies, and all this money must be raised on a valuation of $2,100,484,-905. It was said in the Finance Department resterday that the tax rate will not be far from 2.13 if no further additions as the result of last winter's legislation are made. From the first table it is easily seen that new buildings cut a very important figure this year. All along Broadway up to Fourteenth street the increase is marked. The First ward, that part of the city south of Liberty street shows an increase of $4.727,415, all in new office buildings. The Fifteenth ward comes next with an increase of $2.604.800. This ward is bounded by Houston and Fourteenth streets, Broadway and Fourth avenue and the Bowery. This increase is caused by new building. The enormous increase up town is due in large part to the annexation last year of 15,500 acres of land in Westchester county.

An examination of the books shows what the rich men of the city will pay on their personal property. The following are some examples of the amounts at which they are assessed for personal tax:

ENLARGING THE STATE PARK. The Proposal to Issue $1,000,000 Bonds to Buy More Adirendack Lands.

ALBANY, July 6 .- The issue of $1,000,000 in bonds by the State to purchase additional land in the Adtrondack region within the confines of the State Park is to be vigorously advocated by the State Fisheries, Game and Forest Commission. Over 200,000 acres have been offered for sale to the Commission at an av erage rate of $1.50 per acre, but there is no available money. Nearly twice as much more will also be offered as soon as there is any available money to permit of purchasee by the State.

The Commission favors the issue of the bands to run from twenty to thirty years, $100,000 of the bonds to be redeemable each year after the twentieth year.

A special committee was appointed by the last Assembly, of which Assemblyman Wagstaff of Brocklyn is Chairman, to inquire into the advisability of the State purchasing additional lands in the Adirondacks with a view of solidifying the State's holdings in the State park, and for the better protection of the Hudson River waterahed. This committee has arranged for a three weeks' trin through the woods, to start on Monday next, to inspect the lands which have been effered for sale and to meet the owners. The State Fisheries, Game and Forest Commissioners will accompany the committee. As a result of its investigation, the committee will report to the next Legislature, and will, it is expected, endorse its plan for a bond issue. able money to permit of purchases by the State

A FIREBUG'S CONFESSION. HE TELLS ABOUT THE SETTING OF

"Mechanic" Cincelman Testifies Against Birschkopf, Who Is Under Indictment for Murder in Connection with the Pire in Which Lizzie Yanger Loss Her Life. Max Glueckman, the firebug "mechanic," or man who applied the torch for the east side firebugs, told all he knew yesterday before Justice Fursman in the criminal part of the Supreme Court about Adelph Hirschkopt's connection with the alleged incendiary Bre at 129 Suffolk street on May 30, 1894. Hirschkopf is charged with murder in the first degree, a little girl named Lizzie Yseger having been burned to death in the fire. Glueckman, who confessed to having set fire to Louis Gordon's shirt factory, and upon whose testimony Gordon was convicted, acted as if the recital of his own crimes appalled him. Hirschkopf is a firebug informer, too, and it was he who, when Glueckman fled to Europe after the disclosure of the Gordon conspiracy, lured him back to this country on the pretence, Gluecknan ears, that they were to go into the firebug business in the West. Glueckman is a nervous Polish Jew. He has a thin face and hollow checks, and his frightened black eyes and prison pallor make him look like a lunatio. Glueckman, in answer to questions by Assistant District Attorney Vernon M. Davis estified as to Hirschkopf's alleged plot to set fire to the tenement. He said that he became acquainted with Hirschkopf early in 1894. He met him at the house of Samuel Milch, another firebug. Hirschkopf then lived at 61 Norfolk street. Glueckman said that he saw Solomon Kleinrock, who kept the saloon on the ground floor of the tenement, in Hirschkopf's house two weeks before the fire. There was a man named Selzer there, too. Klien rock said to Hirschkopf, according to the witbess: "I must have the fire this month; I need the money." Hirschkopf said that he would try to arrange it, but the adjuster of the Niagara Insurance Company could not be "fixed." He told Kleinrock to prepare his saloon for the fire, stocking it with empty barrels and bottles. Kleinrock replied that he had not even the fire, stocking it with empty barrels and bottles. Kleinrock replied that he had not even the money to buy these and Hirschkopf gave him some. Kleinrock then signed a paper and went away.

Glusckman said that three days before the fire he and Shier Rosenbaum were at a meeting between Hirschkopf and aman named Meyer Brunner. The latter wanted Hirschkopf to arrange a fire for him. This testimony was excluded as irrevenant. On the morning of May 30, 1894, the witness called at Hirschkopf's house and the d-fendant gave him a bag and a demijohn with instructions to take them to Rienrock's salson. Hirschkopf then offered him $50 if he would start the fire that night. Grasekman says he replied:

"I will not set the fire at night with all those women and child myself and would just-as soon endanger their lives as those of others."

"We don't think abent such things hers in America." Hirschkopf replied. "We only look to make money and those things don't concern us haif a minute.

Glusckman declares that he remained firm in his decision not to set the fire at night, and finally left, going to his home at 508 South Fifth street, Brooklyn. That afternoon Hirschkopf called at his house and was so persistent that Glusckman says he went out with him so as not to anney his wife.

At this point Lawyer Loew, for the defence, objected to the interpretation of the witness' testimony by the court interpreter. Philip Dallim. One of the jurymen, however, deslared that he interpreter was correct in his interpretation and the Court ruled out the objection.

clared that the interpreter was correct in his interpretation and the Court ruled out the objection.

Glueckman says that he returned to New York with Hirschkopf and on the way the latter continued to try and induce him to undertake the job of setting the fire.

"You take no responsibility in the matter," he said. "I am the boss and will look out for you.

They met Snier Rosenbaum, and the three visited several saloons and music halls. Hirschkopf asked Rosenbaum to do the job, but he declined. At 11:30 o'clock that night they had supper in Sliverman's restaurant in Grand street, and then went to Kieinrock's saloon. There, Glueckman raid, he met Meyer Dietschek, who is also indicted for murder. Hirschkopf renewed his pleadings to Glueckman to start the fire, and at 1:30 o'clock in the myrning. Glueckman said, having positively refused to start the fire, he threatened to raise a row unless he was let out of the place. He heard Hirschkopf offer Dietschek $15 to start the fire, and they were arranging the shavings for it when he left the saloon. The day after the fire he called at Hirschkopf's home and found the latter and his wife quarrelling. "You viliain, Rosenbaum did not do this, bad as he was," the woman said. "You did it for the money. You'd do anything for money."

JAMES STIBLING DROWNED.

He Fell from the Wharf at Cold Spring, of Which He Was a Well-known Resident, The body of James Stirling, 71 years old, of Cold Spring, N. Y., was found in the Hudson near the principal wharf of the town on Sunday night. He had been missing since Friday night. After supper on Friday he visited the usual village gathering places. It was noticed that he was considerably wrought up over the present political situation. He has always been an ardent Democrat.

At a little before 11 o'clock on Friday night At a little before 11 o'clock on Friday night he went to the village barber shop for a shave and a haircut. Half an hour later two young men, Clarence Sayre and John McCue, passed him as he was going down the street toward the river, with his hands clasping his coat lapels and bis head bowed, "Hello, Jimmy," said Sayre. Despite his age, everybody in the village, old and young, called him "Jimmy."

Mr. Stirling looked up, nodded, and smiled without pausing. He seldom spoke unnecessarily. sarily.
"Jimmy's feeling good," remarked Sayre, commenting on the cordiality of the old man's smile.

At night when she returned the meal had not been touched, and then she found that Stirling's bed had not been disturbed since the previous night. She spread the alarm, and on Sunday afternoon when young Sayre heard of the old man's disappearance, he told of seeing him godown to the river. Stirling's habit of sitting on the milk cans on the dock, dozing, was well known, and it suddenly occurred to everybody that he must have fallen overboard. The river was dragged and the body was found about fifty feetfrom the dock. CURTAILING PRODUCTION. Over 4,000,000 Print Cloth Spindlos Rum ping on Short Time. Boston, July 6 .- On last Thursday there was meeting here of the Arwright Club, composed of treasurers of New England print cloth mill corporations, at which a committee reported that managers of over 4,000,000 spindles in Massachusetta, Rhode Island, and Connectiout Massachusetta, Hnode Island, and Connecticut had signed an agreement to curtail the production during the months of July and August.

It was also reported that there were already enough spindles then running short time in the southern New England States to bring the aggregate to over 5,000,000.

As a consequence the greatest curtailment in the history of the textile industry of New England is now taking place. Mill men say that this action is necessary, as they are carrying large stocks due to overproduction, which cannot be disposed of except at runnous prices.

The stock market opened at a fractional imovement upon the final prices of last Friday. owing to the advance in American securities in London over the holiday, and which was main tained when business was resumed here this morning. Operators for a decline, who, according to all accounts, have made extensive commitments, were obviously not satisfied with the tendency of this market to follow the lead of London, and therefore made a sharp and somewhat effective demonstration against the Industrial stocks. They were doubtless influenced in attacking that section of the market because those stocks do not enjoy the support of foreign buying. The demonstration was not long lived, and then the trading became lifeless. The presence of two opposing parties in the market, neither of them particularly aggressive, resulted in an irregular and narrow speculation.

In the late dealings foreign arbitrage houses bought more extensively than earlier in the day, and thus brought about a rally that left the majority of the list slightly higher than on Friday. The aggregate purchases by foreign arbitrage houses were trustworthly estimated at fully 20,000 shares. The effect of these operations upon the foreign exchange market was more pronounced to-day than at any time last week. Both nominal and actual rates for sterling were lowered and sight sterling was freely offered at $4.87%, which is about a cent below the rate at which the greater part of recent exports

The market is beginning to act as if professional speculators, at least, had discounted the worst that the Silverites, Populists, and other cranks may do at Chicago. At the same time information comes to Wall street through various trustworthy channels that the bulk of the recent purchases of American railway stocks for London has been for account of a group of operators who accumulated enormous fortunes in the Kaffir speculation, and who have, as was foreshadowed some months ago, practically abapdoned that field and turned their attention to American shares, particularly those that have always been popular in London, namely, St. Paul and Louisville and Nashville, and several of the very low-priced stocks. Final sales compare with those of last Friday
